Teachers rally at state capitol Philippine presence could end for U.S.

By TONIA SHARP
Universe Staff Writer

Strike-alerted Utah teachers oversaw the state capitol rotunda yesterday in a rally for increased educational spending.

Thousands of Utah teachers showed up for the rally, in which the Utah Education Association announced the measures they felt would save Utah education the "fair shake" needs and prevent a teacher strike.
Results of Friday's statewide UEA strike vote were tallied late Saturday afternoon.

By a 75 percent majority teachers repealed the UEA board of directors the authority to call a strike, said Beth Beck, UEA vice-president.

Friday, legislators announced an education plan that would provide a 7 percent increase in spending, which included a $1000 a year raise in teacher salaries. Teachers called the proposal and pay raise "a farce."

"The pay raise isn't enough," said
Paul Matlin, a Salt Lake District teacher.

"It's just something thrown at us to get us off their (legislators') backs.
What we need is more funding for reduced class sizes."

Utah is currently ranked at the bottom in average class sizes nationally and 46th in average teacher salaries.

Ten years ago Utah was ranked 25th in average salary, said Bob Beall of the Granite Education Association.

"In the Granite school district for grades 2-6 the student/teacher ratio is 31.5 to one," Beall said.

Representative
Kelly Atkinson (D-Salt Lake) said the 6.7 percent WPU (weighted pupil unit) spending increase includes 2.7 percent for $1000 per year
salary increase, 2 percent for added insurance.

The remaining 2 percent for increase in increments, administrative salary increases and retirement funding.

Teachers are looking for a firmer commitment to education, said Beck.

"The value of education is what we climbed this hill for today," said
Kathy Bone, Davis County district
UEA representative.

"We may not be able to solve all our problems, but we must have the courage to try."

And "courage to try" just might mean a strike if teachers needs aren't met.

According to the UEA outlined proposal, Friday's education package must be clar-ified, enhanced and enacted.

UEA officials
do not want the 2 percent retirement plan to be included in the legislator's plan,
and also want the current 4 percent WPU increase enhanced.

Additional points covered by the UEA's proposal demand a five-year plan for the immediate improvement of education that "must contain a substantive commitment."

Bonding for additional years of technology increases must also be approved. They also noted that an acceptable board leeway must not contain a 10 percent referendum provision.

Many of the teachers feel the 10 percent referendum provision in a board leeway that is supposed to provide more money for the schools would lead to "richer districts getting richer and poorer districts getting poorer," Matlin said.

"The same provision was given to Massachusetts schools and what has happened there is that the poorer, blue-collar worker school districts voted against an increase in property taxes," Matlin, a rallying teacher, said.

"Some Utah districts will benefit from the provision, but some will suffer."

UEA officials said their proposed increases can come from repealing the $38 million tax cut made in September or that Utah's $48 million "rainy day" fund can be used, which are two unlikely sources in the eyes of legislators' who face just two more days in session.

"The likelihood of the tax cut being repealed is very slim," Atkinson said.

Even so, UEA is on the horizon if needs are not met satisfactorily, said Beck.

But in wake of September's teacher walk out, teachers did voice their concern.

They said they would give ample warning if they will strike for the sake of students and parents.

MANILA, Philippines — Defense
Secretary Dick Cheney, shunned by Philippine President Corazon Aquino, told Filipino officials Monday that the United States will abandon its bases here if it finds that keeping them is too expensive or that Americans are unwelcome.

As violence was reported in several clashes between leftist protesters and police near U.S. installations, Cheney met for nearly three hours with Defense Minister Fidel Ramos in discussions that were described as "very cordial, very forthright."

Meeting reporters afterward with Ramos, Cheney said the United States "will stay only as long as the Philippine people wish it to stay — and only if the terms negotiated are acceptable to both parties."

At issue in Monday's discussions was a $96 million cut Congress made in the Bush administration's request of $360 million to compensate the Philippines for the six bases, which include two of the United States' largest overseas installations, Clark
Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base.

"We recognize there is a shortfall of $96 million over what we had anticipated," Cheney said. "I also pointed out that in East Asia, in this part of the world, the United States provided a little over $600 million, and about $500 million of that comes specifically to the Philippines."

Cheney has said his discussions with Filipino officials did not amount to the beginning of negotiations to extend the base agreement, which expires next year.

An influential Filipino minority is pressuring Mrs. Aquino not to renew the agreement. In addition, leading Filipino congressmen have urged her to postpone those discussions until this year's cuts are restored.

There are some 18,000 U.S. military personnel in the Philippines, plus 20,000 dependents.

For his part, Ramos acknowledged that the Bush administration needs congressional approval for aid commitments but said he had told Cheney that "time is of the essence" in meeting current U.S. obligations.

Mrs. Aquino was so upset over the congressional cut that she announced before Cheney began his two-week tour of Asian nations hosting U.S.
bases that she would not see him,
leaving that task to her defense minister.

Sunday storm wreaks havoc; avalanche warnings in effect

Associated Press

Eastern and southwestern Utah residents were digging out Monday from a storm that walloped the areas with up to three feet of new snow, while a wind warning remained in effect for the Wasatch Front.

Thirty-six or more inches of snow fell in the mountains around Provo over the past three days, prompting an avalanche warning from the Utah Avalanche Forecast Center.

"We think there's a high hazard for avalanches in that area," said center director Bruce Tremper. "If you don't have good avalanche skills, avoid slopes steeper than 30 degrees and stay away from avalanche runout areas."

On Friday, a snowslide descended nearly 5,000 feet at the base of Loafer Mountain, just east of Salem, coming within 100 feet of hitting a home, Tremper said.

Meanwhile, a cold, moist, upper-level and low-pressure system was moving across northern Arizona Monday, spreading moisture into southern and eastern sections of Utah. By early morning, the Utah Highway Patrol in Price and Kanab reported up to an inch of snow.
The southbound lane of Interstate 15 was closed from

Fillmore south to Beaver following a multi-car pileup near Cove Fort Sunday night. Dozens of cars slid off the road on the hill south of the Dog Valley Rest Area, and the freeway remained closed about two hours while wreckers cleared the mess.

High winds and snow were blamed for two power outages over the weekend in southern Utah. Most of Cedar City was without power Saturday night for an hour or more after a short ignited a pole between New Harmony and Kanarraville.

Sunday night, high winds broke a line within a thousand feet of the first problem, leaving New Harmony and Kanarraville residents without power in some areas until 2 a.m.

Utah Power & Light Co. supervisor Scott Rasmussen said high winds and drifting snow up to four feet deep complicated the problem and made it extremely difficult for repair crews to find the source. Several UP&L trucks were stuck in snowdrifts attempting to reach the site.

Heavy snow conditions were expected to spread to the remainder of eastern Utah, with snow accumulations of 4 or more inches in the valleys and 8 or more inches in the mountains predicted.

Var White spray paints the roof of Snoopy's doghouse located in front of White's house at sculpture with his daughter after the snowstorm on Sunday. Many additional snow scultures showed up around campus as well.

SCERA to show Y's collection of Cecil B. Demille movies

By DAN COOK
Universe Staff Writer

Several pieces of BYU's Cecil B.
Demille collection will be on display at the SCERA Theatre March 2 in conjunction with the introduction of a restored 70-millimeter version of De-mille's "The Ten Commandments."

Jim D'Arc, curator of the Arts and Communications Archives at BYU, said that pieces of the collection will be loaned as a service to Demille's contribution to film.

"It's a one-of-a-kind collection," he said. "It's a real treasure right here in our own back yard."

The Demille display and the showing of his 1956 classic, "The Ten Commandments," are part of a one-night benefit for the proposed SCERA Arts Center.

The event will include an opportunity for the public to meet Charleton Heston and Arnold Friberg, who are donating their time in support of the arts, said SCERA Marketing Director Brandon Miller.

Heston played the part of Moses in Demille's film, and Friberg was the costume designer and technical assistant. The robe Heston wore as Moses, now in Friberg's possession, will also be on display at the showing.

Articles from the BYU collection that could be on display are scripts, photographs and several Arnold Friberg paintings — including the 4-by-8 mural of the "Parting of the Red Sea."

"It all depends on what kind of locked glass cases they have," D'Arc
said.

BYU officials approached Demille's daughter, Cecilia Demille Harper, in 1976 when they heard the collection was available and made a presentation for the preservation and cataloguing of the collection. After talking, Harper said the family would think about it and asked BYU to keep in touch.

They talked with her off and on for a year until one day she called and said, "We've decided. Come down and get it."

Upon arriving at the Demille mansion, D'Arc said they found the entire collection just the way it had been left for 30 or 40 years. According to D'Arc, there were more boxes than the 17-foot truck they had rented could hold. "Between 1977 and 1988
we probably brought five or six truck-loads, and it has taken us until this year to catalog everything," he said.

In all, there were 1,263 boxes of film scripts, papers, box office receipts, video tapes, production files
— virtually anything you could imagine a motion picture company would generate, he said.

Foundation Director April Wetzel
said they conducted a survey of Orem residents' attitudes toward the arts and received an "overwhelming" response. People want a place to exhibit art, learn acting, dance and performing.

However, they will not start building until they have all the money, she said. The cost of the community center is estimated at $3 million with another $1 million for an endowment.

Tickets for the one-night event cost $30 and are considered a tax deductible donation to the cultural arts center.

Snow contest to begin

By CAROL YAGER

Piles of snow and a few snow sculptures have appeared around campus, but due to the cold weather the majority of the sculpting won't begin until this week.

The snow sculpting contest, which was originally scheduled for last week as a part of BYUSA's Winter Carnival, has been postponed. Students can still sign up with the receptionist on the 4th floor of the ELWC.

The groups that have already signed up include the People Building Character Organization, the American Sportsmen Club, Intercollegiate Knights, the Arts department and three student groups.

"The snow sculpting is one of the biggest events of Winter Carnival.
We have delayed some of the actual sculpting so more students can get involved," said Jeff Pickard, a sophomore from Raleigh, N.C.

Czech leader to meet with Bush today

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vaclav Havel, the dissident playwright who went from prison to the presidency of Czechoslovakia inside of eight months, will meet with President Bush on Tuesday, the first of Eastern Europe's new democratic leaders to visit the White House.

Havel was arriving here Monday evening after stops in Iceland and Canada on a Western trip that comes conspicuously a week before his first trip to Moscow.

The Czech Parliament elected Havel president Dec. 29, a few weeks after a peaceful revolution led to the ouster of Communist Party chief Milos Jakes and his hard-line government.

Now the country, under Havel's caretaker government, is preparing for June 8 parliamentary elections that will be its first free balloting in more than 40 years.

Havel has said he is coming West not to look for charity but investment in a country that already maintains a standard of living well above that of Poland, its neighbor to the north.

"Czechoslovakia is not looking for U.S. aid. They are not in the same economic dire straits that ... Poland has been in," a senior Bush administration official said.

Secretary of State James A. Baker
III, in a brief visit to Prague Feb. 6, already signaled support for giving Czechoslovakia most-favored-nation trade status and allowing it to rejoin the International Monetary Fund. It was a founding member of the IMF, but was evicted after the 1948 communist takeover.

And, if Congress approves,
Czechoslovakia would share in a pool of $300 million in new aid the Bush administration has requested for the emerging democracies in Eastern Europe.

The United States has already announced plans to reopen its consulate shuttered for more than four decades in Bratislava in the Slovak region of Czechoslovakia.

The administration also expects to expand exchanges and possibly dispatch Peace Corps volunteers to Czechoslovakia, said the official who briefed White House reporters on the Havel visit.

The new Czech government is prodding the Soviets to remove their 73,500 troops as quickly as possible.
Sharing borders with both East and West Germany, Czechoslovakia also has no small stake in the thrust toward German reunification.

The Czechs "favor a Europe that is democratic and in which Germany plays a role, but not necessarily a dominant role. ..." said the U.S. official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Retarded man just wants to be left alone

OREM — After decades of making people nervous, Bernt Murphy just wants to be left alone to pick up the pieces of a life misspent in a mental hospital.

He even bought a welcome mat for the group home he shares with other retarded men so his neighbors will know they are harmless. But it's received precious little wear.

Mildly retarded at birth, Murphy was 19 when he was arrested in 1957 on charges he raped and beat a 5-year-old girl. During questioning about that crime, police said he confessed to a murder two years before of a 23-year-old woman Murphy had known as a student at the Utah State Training School for the mentally retarded.

He was judged incompetent to stand trial for rape and was never charged with the murder. His attorneys now claim Murphy was a convenient suspect who admitted responsibility for the slaying under intense pressure from police.

Declared insane, Murphy spent more than three decades at the Utah State Hospital in Provo until the Utah Supreme Court ruled in 1988 that Murphy was mentally retarded, not insane, and ordered a plan for releasing him.

Last month, he was secretly whisked to the duplex in nearby Orem. He shares it with three other men who, like Murphy, hold day jobs and are supervised at night.

Timp center layoffs to follow filing

PROVO — Timpanogos Community Mental Health Center will lay off at least 12 people in the wake of its recent filings for Chapter 9 bankruptcy, officials say.

Timp Mental Health Authority Board members were told at their monthly meeting Friday that the center's revenue for fiscal 1989-90 is down by $1 million, putting its budget at $6 million.

Jerry Syme, director of administrative services, said most of the loss in revenues comes from fewer Medicaid dollars — about $1.2 million less. Center officials are cutting the budget by $700,000 to minimize employee cuts, he said.

The budget also showed a net loss of $500,000 at the end of 1989. But "we feel we have sufficient reserve to carry only $300,000 worth of debt and include it in next year's budget," Syme said. If the debt grows, however, more cuts will be made.

Most of the layoffs are from the center's adult residential and adult day treatment programs.

Japanese conservatives maintain power

TOKYO — Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said Monday the voters gave his party a vote of confidence in its time of greatest crisis by keeping the Liberal Democrats in control of Parliament.

Some Japanese who voted Sunday said they were angry with the Liberal Democrats because of political scandal and an unpopular sales tax but still were not ready to entrust the government to the opposition Socialists.

Business leaders called the result a vote for the economic policies that have brought unprecedented prosperity to Japan.

Liberal Democrats implicated in the Recruit influence-buying scandal were re-elected, including former prime ministers Yasuhiro Nakasone, 72, and Noboru Takeshita, 65. Nakasone ran as an independent.

Kaifu said they were "absolved" by the voters but added: "We must proceed with political reforms" in the party that has governed Japan since its founding in 1955.

"The result of the election is a vote of confidence of the people under the constitution, and our government has passed it (the crisis)," Kaifu said.

Book of famous quotes now available

WASHINGTON — As Otto von Bismarck once said, "Politics is the art of the possible" — as possible as wrongly attributing the quote to a legendary Irish barkeeper.

For pundits and politicians wanting to punch up their pronouncements with such pithy remarks, help is at hand. For $29, the Library of Congress will provide 2,100 similarly sage sayings, and with the right attribution.

Over the years the library's Congressional Research Service has found itself continually bombarded by requests for appropriate quotes for use in papers and speeches. Its researchers have discovered that many a quote popularly attributed to a famous person was actually uttered or scribbled by someone else: for example, the German chancellor's comment on politics often is attributed to Finley Peter Dunne's Mr. Dooley.

The 520-page volume, entitled "Respectfully Quoted: A Dictionary of Quotations from the Congressional Record," and for sale by the Government Printing Office, has several similar examples.

Economy, like the weather, is topsy-turvy

WASHINGTON — The weather isn't the only thing behaving strangely this winter. The economy has been topsy-turvy as well.

In just two months, December and January, many economists went from predicting an impending economic downturn to believing that the longest peacetime expansion in history has found another of its nine lives.

The new general consensus of moderate economic growth this year is likely to be an important element in Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan's testimony before Congress Tuesday when he reveals the Fed's policy targets for 1990. These targets will have a major influence on interest rates and economic growth.

Some analysts now look for 3 percent annual growth in the January-March quarter, six times the pace from October through December.

Greenspan, in an unusually candid comment, said that the chance of a recession had diminished markedly since last spring and that the fourth quarter's sluggish growth was likely to prove only a "temporary hesitation."

Students surveyed have environmental concerns

By DAVID J. HIGGINBOTHAM
Universe Staff Writer

According to a newly released opinion survey commissioned by the National Wildlife Federation (NWF), today's college students hold deep concerns about the environment, with 95 percent feeling that Congress should pass stricter laws to protect the environment, and 94 percent are willing to pay more for products that are environmentally sound.

The survey, conducted in November 1989 by Hughes Research Corp., polled 500 undergraduates enrolled in a four-year college or university and between the ages of 17 and 24 (including BYU), said Nick Keller, a national coordinator for NWF.

According to the survey, the students questioned revealed strong sentiments on behalf of environmental quality:

Nearly 75 percent believe that recycling of newspapers, glass and cans should be required by law in all communities.

While 66 percent believe that industry today is more concerned about environmental protection than it was five years ago, 76 percent said that industry influences government to pass less effective environmental protection laws.

Seventy percent of the students polled said environmental protection is an important issue when voting, according to the survey.

When asked, who is responsible for protecting the environment, 80 percent responded that "all of us" have primary responsibility for environmental protection, with 24 percent giving responsibility to the federal government.

"Given their intense concern for the environment and their willingness to get personally involved in the issue, this survey paints the picture of American college students as a formidable resource ready to go to work to help solve our environmental problems."

Help programs available to the needy

By COREY L. ANDERSON
Universe Staff Reporter

Utah Valley has a number of programs that focus on the mental, physical and financial concerns of needy individuals.

Myla Dutton, director of Mountainland Community Action Agency, said the services offer everything from food and legal help to medical care and bus tokens. Most programs are either free, based on the ability to pay, or inexpensive enough to allow needy individuals the opportunity to acquire necessities.

"Students are not excluded from the programs," said Dutton, "but they must be in real need to qualify."

She said help can be provided for a variety of needs. A person may temporarily need a few dollars of gas money before payday, for example, or need a haircut. "It is important to remember, however, that the services are not intended to be forever," Dutton said.

Human services supervisor Maryann Stevens classified the charitable help as "temporary programs to help see individuals over temporary difficulties." No one should feel ashamed to use the services, and anyone who is eligible will be helped, she said.

Jerry Cahill, spokesman for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, said it is important to be aware of the principles when using low-income programs. "Members of the church should always be self-reliant and shouldn't have to shift that responsibility to someone else."

Cahill said before government or charity help is received, assistance should first be sought from an individual's family and bishop. It is not wrong to use government programs, but "don't leave the bishop out of the loop."

The bishop can provide assistance for the needy through the LDS Church, said Cahill, or can at least counsel members to the best resources available for specific needs.

He added, "Using charity programs to stay in school cannot be ranked with the needs of the homeless." It would be wiser to sit out from school and work for a semester than to deny those really suffering from needed help.

Every situation is different, however, and the final decision rests with each individual, said Cahill.

The following is a description of some of the most popular services that are provided for students that are in need:

BYU's Financial Services offers information on how to apply for a Pell Grant through the federal government. A Pell Grant is not a loan, but a grant given to students from the government to assist in educational costs. Ford Stevenson, director of BYU's financial aid department, said there are two categories of students that can apply: dependent students, whose eligibility is determined by their parent's income level, and independent students, whose eligibility is determined by their own income.

Stevenson said the program is not allowing students to receive something for nothing, because "students have to take 12 hours of credit and be progressing towards a degree to qualify." The government is investing in students who are improving themselves.

The Provo City Housing Authority owns and manages 250 units of public housing in the city. Executive Director Doug Carlson said the units are distributed among 25 sites, and rent is based on income levels and family size.

In addition to the public housing, said Carlson, "another one of our programs allows the needy to live in an apartment of their choice, and then to have their rent subsidized." There are now 406 apartments utilizing this program.

Carlson said the program works on a preference system. This allows the more needy, elderly or single parent families a better chance of acceptance.

In addition to the Provo City Housing Authority, there is the Housing Authority of Utah County and several other shelter programs.

The Home Energy Assistance Program, HEAT, helps with the payment of heating bills and runs from Nov. 1 through March 31 of each year.

Supervisor for the federal program, Janet Partlow, said payment is made according to income, and the funds are given directly to the utility company.

Partlow said "the program is not a handout, and is not welfare." The funds come from a tax that is put on the sale of oil and so can be considered "kind of a rebate."

She said the program attracts more younger individuals because, "the elderly will pay their heating bills and then skimp on food. Students, however, will eat first and then pay their heating bills later."

Medical assistance can be acquired through the federal Medicaid program. Renee Bartling, manager of prior authorization for Medicaid's Salt Lake City office, said Medicaid help is based on eligibility requirements. Before help can be given, individuals need to be referred through Social Services and need to find a physician who will accept Medicaid's discount pay rate.

Bartling said help must be sought from the patient's existing insurance companies first because Medicaid is known as "the payer of last resort."

Low-income individuals who do not qualify for Medicaid can receive help from the Utah Medical Assistance Program. Health program manager John Gledhill said, "our program will pay 100 percent of what Medicaid pays." There are still qualifications, however, and cases must be referred by a social worker.

Testing may be reduced Plans underway to curtail weapons

The United States and the Soviet Union should reach an agreement to end underground nuclear tests and the production of chemical weapons within three months, said Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah.

In a telephone interview published by the Deseret News Thursday, Owens said he learned about the accord from U.S. State Department officials when he was in Moscow. Secretary of State James Baker was visiting Soviet officials at the time.

Following Baker's visit, both countries announced they would begin destroying most of their chemical weapons. However, there hasn't been a commitment to halt chemical weapons production or to ban nuclear testing.

The proposed agreement "would not be a comprehensive test ban but would ban tests larger than a kiloton or so," Owens said.

Owens said he has "learned authoritatively that (President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev) are heading toward having those agreements in place by the June summit" in Washington.

Owens is in the Soviet Union as a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Owens' press secretary, Art Kingdom, said the Tooele Army Depot is already constructing a facility to destroy chemical weapons. Leaking containers of nerve gas are among the weapons scheduled for destruction.

The congressman is sponsoring a bill in the House to apologize to and compensate uranium miners and others who contracted cancer because of nuclear testing in Nevada during the 1950s and 1960s, Kingdom said. If the victim is dead, the money will be given to the deceased's family.

He said the bill would give $100,000 to uranium miners and $50,000 to other "downwinders" who got cancer because of the testing.

Former miners testified they held contests to see who could breathe on a Geiger counter and make it react the most, Kingdom said.

The bill is designed to compensate people who were victimized by a government that "could have made efforts to warn and safeguard people," he said.

Kingdom said Owens is also trying to attach an amendment to the bill that would give $15,000 to individual sheep ranchers who had losses among their flocks.

The bill is in a House Judiciary Committee and will move to the Full Committee by March, he said. If it passes the Full Committee the bill will proceed to the Senate where it is sponsored by Utah Senator Orrin Hatch.

Owens is also sponsoring a bill to revoke the government's right of sovereign immunity, which protects it from law suits, Kingdom said.

Polish Catholics break ground for new center

Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland — Ground was broken Monday for a prayer center that officials hope will end the long-festering dispute over a Roman Catholic convent at the Auschwitz death camp.

Also Monday, Edgar Bronfman, president of the World Jewish Congress, met with President Wojciech Jaruzelski and Prime Minister Tadeusz Mazowiecki and declared later: "There are no outstanding problems between the Jewish people and Poland."

The convent housing about a dozen Carmelite nuns on the edge of the Nazi death camp has angered Jews and others worldwide who see it as an intrusion of Christian symbols at a site where most of the victims were Jews.

The Roman Catholic church agreed at negotiations in 1987 in Switzerland to relocate the nuns to an interfaith prayer and education center farther from the camp, but a February 1989 deadline for moving the nuns was missed.

After Polish church officials balked last year at fulfilling the agreement, the Vatican intervened in September and upheld the decision.

The new Solidarity-led government of Mazowiecki also has worked to speed up construction of the new center.

Cardinal Franciszek Macharski of

Krakow, whose archdiocese has jurisdiction over the site near the southern Polish city of Oswiecim, presided over the groundbreaking ceremony.

"May justice, peace and love radiate from this place and let people find enough strength in this place to overcome what divides them, for the ... good of mankind," Macharski said as he took a shovel and dug out a few scoopsful of dirt.

During his meeting in Warsaw with Bronfman, Macharski said his government's support of the project was illustrated by the presence at the ceremony of Jacek Ambroziak, head of the Office of the Council of Ministers and the prime minister's close aide.

Design majors help homeless

By SUZANNE CROWE

BYU graphic design students completed a television commercial this week that finalized their year-long campaign encouraging Utahns to donate money from state tax returns to the homeless, said a Graphic Design Department faculty member.

Adrien Pulfer said the students accepted a request from the Utah State Legislature in September that they use the homelessness problem as an issue of focus for a senior class project.

"Last year's seniors also worked on this issue and met with great success," Pulfer said. "Though all the posters, billboards and commercials we've created are completely new, we opted to accept the state's invitation because we could see from last year's success that this was an area where we could make a difference."

In order to accurately portray the variety of circumstances surrounding homeless people, Pulfer said the students chose to film the commercial at the scene of an actual shelter in Salt Lake City.

"It was shocking for everyone to see the number and scope of people in this situation," Pulfer said.

"We spoke with individuals who as recently as last month lived in an apartment, but have since lost their homes because they just couldn't make ends meet."

According to a study published by Provo's Food and Shelter Coalition, on any given day 1,400 to 2,400 people are homeless in Utah.

One-fourth of the homeless are families, single women and children. Most are looking for employment, and 63 percent of the homeless worked at the same job for at least three years before losing it.

While filming the commercial, students said shelter residents were generally very helpful, but some noticed a few with negative reactions.

Brian Wolsey, a senior, majoring in graphic design, said he noticed an 18-year-old male resident protesting the commercial.

"The guy was angry at what we were doing," said Wolsey.

"He felt very strongly that since none of us had ever been homeless, we shouldn't be the ones creating the commercial — that we couldn't understand what it felt like."

"It was interesting to hear that though many people do feel homelessness is a rare thing, the state fundraising authorities speculate there are literally millions of working Americans who are within 1 to 2 paychecks of losing their homes," Pulfer said.

According to literature published by the State of Utah, approximately 40,000 Utah taxpayers donated roughly $300,000 last year by checking boxes on their tax return forms.

The literature also cited that donations were allocated to both state and private non-profit agencies, emphasizing emergency shelters, self-sufficiency programs, substance abuse and mental health treatment centers and services to families with children.

objective of the contests is to encourage creativity. "We are looking for fresh ideas," he said.

Morrison said booths will be set up today through Friday in the ELWC

Garden Court.

Some of the projects to be displayed include a Geodesic Dome, a house built of triangles and a demonstration of Movie-Dot BYU.

Shelley Chamberlain, a 23-year-old senior from Newhall, Calif., majoring in civil engineering, said the reason for Engineering Week is to show how engineering affects the average person's daily life.

"You couldn't have a drink of water without engineers," she said.

Olsen said, "Try to imagine a world without engineering technology. You wouldn't have bridges.

"You wouldn't have 72-story buildings. You wouldn't have a way to keep warm in the 72-story building," Olsen said.

Chamberlain said the reason for Engineering Week being right after President's Day was to commemorate George Washington, who was one of the first Americans to make a contribution to engineering.

She said he was the first to show engineering could be incorporated with government.

Capital essential, says speaker

By TAMMY WILLIAMS
Universe Staff Writer

Putting the capital back into capitalism is one aspect of the Austrian economic theory, said a professor of economics at Auburn University.

Roger Garrison said, "To get a usable theory of capital, you have to go to Austrian theory of economics." He spoke Friday on traditional economic problems as part of the Austrian Economics Symposium.

In the speaker introductions, a member of the Economics Department said, "The modern Austrian school is often excluded from the popular textbooks because of its unorthodox approach to economics. It emphasizes deductive reasoning, the gold standard, free markets, entrepreneurship and 'laissez faire' policies."

"Government policies based on flawed theories result in big government, inflation, uncontrolled debt, low rates of savings and a boom-bust business cycle."

Garrison said the Depression began in the early 1920s with the Federal Reserve policy. "They began expanding money supply and had incredibly low interest rates," he said. This led to bad investments all through the 1920s, then the economic crunch and business failure.

"The government has no lasting control over inflation and interest rates," Garrison said. The straightforward approach of the 1920s showed that investors didn't know what the Federal Reserve was doing.

"The Federal Reserve didn't know what the Federal Reserve was doing. It was a pristine, naive time," Garrison said.

"In the 80s, the government would push down the interest rates temporarily and eventually it would come back as higher inflation."

Garrison defined basic economic schools' theory differences by analyzing their views of the market. Marxist theory, he said, views the capital market as "perverse and predictable. The economy will rise and fall."

The Keynesian theory of markets says they are "perverse but unpredictable." Capital stock and structure is fixed. "You just don't worry about it," said Garrison. Keynesians view the markets as being "so ill behaved, nothing needs to be said about them. Capital is predictable and non-perverse."

Garrison explained the monetarist view the markets as being "so well behaved, nothing needs to be said about them. Capital is predictable and non-perverse."

"Austrians see capital as being unpredictable and non-perverse," he said. "If markets are allowed to work they will work." Markets are not totally irrational or predictable.

Garrison illustrated the relation between savings and interest. The supply of lendable funds comes from savings. People are more likely to save interest rates are high.

Demand for loans, or the willingness to undertake projects, is higher when the interest rates are low. Garrison said the natural rate is reached when supply and demand are equal.

"In a market economy, interest rates convey information to producers in the market place," he said. "It's important that interest rates tell the truth to keep the economy from biting off more than it can chew."

Outreach Programs' "Cultures of the World" series, which is a collection of culture books on various countries of the world, is scheduled to start production near the middle of this year, said a co-director of Asian Outreach, a department of Outreach Programs.

Barton Thacker said the culture books for Thailand, Vietnam, Korea, Japan, Italy, Germany, Mexico and possibly China are to be the forerunners of a line of culture books that is expected to cover almost every country in the world. "But this will take awhile, since the series was just initiated last year," said Thacker.

These books will cover almost every aspect of a country, ranging from its economy to its history and literature, Thacker said. The books will also contain basic information on the etiquette, customs and traditions of the country.

Shakespeare play performed in SLC

By DAN COOK
Universe Staff Writer

"The Comedy of Errors," playing at the Pioneer Memorial Theatre, is almost unrecognizable as one of Shakespeare's works, but Shakespeare himself would find it hard not to laugh at this production.

Everything a person would expect to find in a 'typical' production of a Shakespeare play is missing from this one, except for the Old English dialogue and the humor that was undoubtedly intended by the author.

Traditional American farce, a lavishly detailed set and less than period costuming gives Pioneer Theatre audiences a fresh new look at a very old play.

"The Comedy of Errors" was first performed in 1594 and is one of Shakespeare's earliest plays.

Director Charles Morey uses traditional American farce and an abundance of movement on stage to clear off the cobwebs and give it new life.

The comical situations created by the mistaken identity of twins who were separated at birth are enhanced because of Morey's direction.

He adds some asides and slapstick that draws laughter from the audience.

Shortly after the second act begins, Bob Kirsh, playing the parts of Antipholus and his twin, comes out and stops the performance.

He holds up a list to the audience which he says contains the names of 22 Shakespeare enthusiasts who have not laughed thus far in the production.

After informing the supposed 12 enthusiasts that production personnel knew where their cars were parked, he said, "I know what you're thinking — they wouldn't do it this way in Cedar City."

Since they are not in Cedar City, this brings spontaneous applause and laughter.

Antipholus, played by Bob Kirsh, tries to woo a reluctant Luciana, played by Bonnie Black. Luciana twin that is married to Luciana's sister, and hesitates because she thinks Antipholus is married to her sister. Actually, it is Antipholus' twin that is married to Luciana's sister, and the twin's name is also Antipholus.

The first scene involves a chase using nearly every character in the cast and also every area of the complex set.

So much is happening that a person could not possibly see everything at once, so the characters effectively do it again.

George Maxwell's liberally decorated set brings well-deserved applause as the curtain goes up.

From fully functional windows and cellar doors in Antipholus's house to the well that Pinch falls down several times, Maxwell's set has it all.

Sausages hanging from the doorway and baskets of fruit and vegetables sitting outside the entrance to the corner shop are among the many details that command appreciation from the audience.

The grate over the sewer system even lifts off to provide a hiding place for two characters during one of the chases.

However, the grate is strong enough support the weight of another character standing on it.

There is nothing Maxwell did not think of.

The acting picks up where the set leaves off and completes a very well rounded production.

Bob Kirsh, playing Antipholus and his twin, and John Guerrasio, playing Dromio and his twin, are exceptional in their efforts to differentiate their two roles.

Kirsh uses subtle yet discernibly different mannerisms to distinguish between his separate, but similar roles.

Guerrasio uses differences in his speech and wit to inform the audience which of the twins he is portraying at any given time.

Tickets are available through the theater's box office which may be reached at 581-6961.

Performances will continue through March 3.

'20s musical shows in Lindon

By REBECCA K. ARGYLE
Universe Staff Writer

Musicals are difficult to do in a small theater, but they bring more rewards, said Rosemarie Taylor, director of the roaring '20s comedy "Jake's Corner."

The musical is being performed at the Valley Center Playhouse in Lindon.

The music and script for "Jake's Corner" was written by playwright Jody Renstrom, who has written and performed original scripts throughout the United States.

"All of the cast has a musical background," Taylor said. "We were very selective."

The audience interacts with the cast throughout the play. The audience cheers on the good guys, boos and hisses at the bad guys and whistles at the chorus girls.

"A responsive audience can make the difference," Renstrom said.

The musical takes place in a speakeasy owned by Jake Grody. Grody is harassed by mob-linked hoods who are after a key to a safe full of diamonds stashed in the club's basement.

Patrick Cloward and Robert Sheen are mobsters in the roaring '20s musical "Jake's Corner." Judy Cook stars as a club singer.

Mobster Chuck Hall, played by Patrick Cloward, falls in love with the club's spotlight singer, Susan McQueen. McQueen is played by Judy Cook, a 19-year-old freshman from Murray, Utah majoring in music dance theater.

"I think there should always be audience participation because the actors are acting among the audience," Cloward said. "The most enjoyable part of doing the show was the audience."

"Jake's Corner" will be performed every Friday, Saturday and Monday through April 2.

Faculty soloists to perform

By KAREN ORTON
Universe Staff Writer

Several faculty soloists are joining to perform "A Program of Chamber Concertos" on Feb. 20 at 7:30 p.m.

Darrel Stubbs, BYU music professor and chamber music coordinator said the faculty concerts usually feature one instrument.

"The faculty is categorized. We have many quintets and they have their own concerts."

"The faculty chamber series crosses the boundaries of strings, woodwinds and brass and makes it possible to perform works written to bring all the instruments together," Stubbs explained.

Stubbs said a concerto involves more than one solo in each piece. For this reason, more instruments may be featured.

The faculty members who will be spotlighted are Barbara and Glen Williams, Darrell Stubbs, Roger Drinkall, Elaine Jorgensen and David Blackinton.

The program will also feature the BYU Chamber Orchestra and Shirley Westwood, a soprano from the voice faculty.

The group presents a concert at least once a semester with faculty members performing on a volunteer basis, Stubbs said.

The faculty chamber concerto to be on Feb. 20 will include works by Haydn, Samuel Barber and Joseph Canteloube.

The concert will held in the Madson Recital Hall HFAC.

The performance is free and open to the public.

Theater commercials to decrease

By REBECCA K. ARGYLE
Universe Staff Writer

Moviegoers may notice 30 percent less screen advertisements in the theaters by March.

Buena Vista Pictures Distribution announced on Feb. 8, a new licensing policy prohibiting paid screen advertising at theaters exhibiting Disney, Touchstone and Hollywood Pictures productions.

Richard Cook, president of Buena Vista, said, "We have been told repeatedly by moviegoers that they do not want and will not tolerate commercial intrusions in movie theaters. The message is loud and clear."

"The policy is something they strongly believe in," said Madeline Franco of Scopes-Garcia and Carlslia, a Salt Lake movie distribution company.

Buena Vista announced that the policy will become effective in March with the release of Touchstone Pictures' "Pretty Woman." This change will not eliminate advertisements in movie theaters completely.

A theater can not advertise Disney, Touchstone and Hollywood Pictures products if they are showing one of their films, Franco said. "According to my sources, this alone accounts for 30 percent of the products advertised."

According to Buena Vista's contract, during competitive bidding, theaters must agree to the policy or be eliminated from consideration for licenses. Violation of the policy after an agreement will result in revocation of the theater's license.

Buena Vista acknowledges permissible exceptions to the policy such as motion picture trailers, intermission slide projections and promotion of approved charities.

"Movie theaters should be preserved as environments where consumers can escape from the pervasive onslaught of advertising," Cook said.

Home videos do not apply to the new policy. However, Franco said, "I would not be surprised to see it spill over into that eventually."

UTEP nips Cougars, WAC race tightens

By SCOTT NIENDORF
Assistant Sports Editor

The BYU men's basketball team was edged, 64-63, Saturday in El Paso, Texas by a resurging UTEP Miners club playing for revenge and a chance to loosen the Cougars' grip on the Western Athletic Conference lead.

BYU dropped its third game-in-a-row in WAC play in the loss to the Miners, leaving the Cougars with a precarious half-game lead over UTEP and Hawaii. BYU falls to 9-4 in WAC play, 19-6 overall, while UTEP climbs to 8-4 in the WAC, 16-8 on the year. Hawaii is also 8-4 in the WAC, 19-6 for all games.

BYU could only manage to build a lead of six points against the Miners while UTEP's largest lead of the game only reached five points in front of the 12,222 fans in the Special Events Center, home of the WAC tournament this year. Cougar Marty Haws led all scorers with 23 points and Andy Toolson added 18 for BYU.

UTEP was led by Marlon Maxey who scored the first 11 points for the Miners en route to scoring 22 points for his team, 17 of which came in the first half. Maxey was a perfect 9-9 shooting from the field.

The Cougars led by five in the closing minutes of the first half, 27-22, but the Miners scored on six of their last seven possessions during a 12-4 run to take a three-point lead into the locker room at halftime, 34-31.

BYU opened the second half with a 14-5 scoring run which included two Kevin Santiago 3-pointers and a Haws steal of a UTEP inbound pass for a layup to give the Cougars their largest lead of the game, 45-39, with 14 minutes remaining in the game.

The Miners surged back to within one point, 46-45, but Toolson answered with a 3-pointer and Haws had a shot goaltended by Antonio Davis to give the Cougars a six-point lead again, 51-45, with nine minutes to play in the game.

UTEP answered with an 8-2 run to take the lead again, 54-53, but on BYU's next possession, Haws was fouled in the act of shooting by UTEP's Hall, but Greg Foster blocked Haws' shot which would have given the Cougars the lead. Three WAC officials were unaware that Foster had used his left hand to help pull himself up to block the shot next to the basket.

The Miners built up a five-point lead in the last minutes of the game but could not put the Cougars away. Toolson hit a 3-pointer with 31 seconds remaining to cut the lead to one, 61-60. But Hall, as in Provo, was fouled in the final seconds of the game to give BYU a last chance to shoot for a possible tie or win. This time, Hall made both shots.

Santiago's shot near the basket was blocked with six seconds left and UTEP's David VanDyke was fouled by Haws after the rebound.

VanDyke made the first free throw to put the game out of reach, although Cougar Mark Heslop's 3-pointer at the buzzer cut the final margin to just one.

BYU plays two of its last three games at home while the Miners play three of their last four on their home court.

The WAC race will probably be decided on the last night of conference play on March 3.

Men's volleyball takes it on the chin

By MICHAEL J. WARD
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's volleyball team took a beating Saturday from the defending national champion UCLA Bruins in front of 2,808 fans in the Smith Fieldhouse.

The Cougars lost to the top-ranked Bruins 15-3, 15-2, 15-10, as the Bruins hit 49 percent to BYU's 16.9 during the match.

After the game, BYU coach Carl McGown said, "We thought we would start adjusting to the pressure matches but obviously we haven't."

UCLA coach Al Scates was pleased with his team's performance. "The two new starters did quite well," said Scates. "I think we'll stay with that lineup."

Bjorn Maaseide and Oren Sher got their first start for UCLA after a lineup change following the Bruins' loss to Long Beach State on Wednesday. Together the two had 24 kills and a hitting percentage of .475 for the game.

In the first game, UCLA sliced through BYU — the Cougars had to call timeout twice during an 11-0 run by the Bruins. BYU's two points came on great plays by Chris Rushing and David Johnston.

The second game started with a Rod Cortez ace that roused the fans back into the game. However, the joy was short-lived. The next point BYU scored came at 13-2, and that was their last. As the Cougars lost the second game 15-2, fans started heading for the exits.

Those that left missed an exciting third game as the Cougars crawled back from a 9-1 deficit to 9-10. Skule Vagen had a solo block on Rich Bland and Ross Burningham and Scott Waddell combined for another.

After a dig off the floor by David Johnston that Waddell finished off, the bleachers started to rumble — the fans were screaming.

The game continued with great sideouts by both teams until Carl Henkel put the stake through BYU's heart by serving an ace for game and match point.

After the game, Waddell, who played for UCLA before serving a mission and transferring to BYU, said, "There's just a lot of little things we still have to work on. As Coach McGown says, 'big things come of little things.'"

Some evaluation of the middle blocking position will take place during practice this week, said McGown. "Colin House and Ross Burningham both played well."

Former BYU coach Tom Peterson returns to BYU with Penn State Friday, Feb. 23, at 7:30 in the Smith Fieldhouse.

Netters dump Kansas St. and UNLV

BYU's 12th-ranked women's tennis team swept weekend matches against Kansas State and the University of Nevada-Las Vegas at the Indoor Tennis Courts, improving its dual meet record to 7-2.

The Cougars beat Kansas State 7-2 on Friday, only losing the No. 5 singles match and the No. 1 doubles match. However, Kansas coach Steve Bietau said, "This is the first time we've had any success against a ranked team."

UNLV assistant coach York Strother said, "BYU is ranked. We're not. That paints the picture right there." UNLV lost to BYU 8-1. "We competed well. We were just out-gunned," he said.

Before playing BYU Friday, Kansas State played UNLV Thursday and lost 5-4. "We definitely played better today (against BYU)," said Bietau.

BYU won five of the six singles matches to assure the match win against UNLV. BYU's Mary Beth Young beat Marije Nel in No. 1 singles play 6-2, 6-1. Shelly Hannah of BYU played in an exhibition match against UNLV's Tracy Parker and won 6-0, 6-0. BYU coach Ann Valentine said these games do not count, but are good experience if both teams have extra players.

Nel and Valerie Rive of Kansas beat Sheri Yandle and Monika Koblikova of BYU in No. 1 doubles play 6-4, 6-4. However, BYU won the No. 2 doubles 5-7, 6-3, 7-5, beating UNLV's Helen Schildknecht and Sara Hancock after Young and Jennifer Holmes came back from a 1-2 deficit in the second set.

Though Valentine said it was an impressive come back, she wasn't yet satisfied with the doubles pairs. "The chemistry is wrong in those combinations," she said. She plans to change them before the Indoor Tennis Championships during the first week of March.

The pair of Anna Funderburk and Patti Urban won both of their doubles matches over the weekend. "They're very dependable," said Valentine. Against Kansas State Funderburk and Urban beat Thresa Burcham and Suzanne Sim in No. 3 doubles play 6-2, 6-2. In No. 2 doubles against UNLV, they beat Debbie Higa and Mary Jancocks 7-6, 6-0.

In Saturday's match against UNLV, BYU's loss came in the No. 1 singles as Jolene Watanabe beat Young 7-6, 7-5. Strother said it was a substantial win for Watanabe since she does not have many opportunities to play ranked players.

"She's difficult to play," said Valentine, who said her versatility upset Young's rhythm. Young said she felt mentally frustrated by the match.

Valentine switched around two doubles teams for the match against UNLV. BYU assistant coach Keith Nielson said BYU played "better doubles than we've played all year."

In the No. 1 doubles match, Young and Koblikova beat UNLV's Watanabe and Diana Chavez 2-6, 6-4, 6-2. In the last match of the day, Young and Koblikova broke serve to win the second set and get ahead in the third. They lost their serve at match point in the third set, but won by breaking serve once again.

BYU's Kim Chang and Shelly Hannah played together for the first time in No. 3 doubles and beat UNLV's Mary Laudenschlager and Teal Lane 6-1, 6-3.

Nielson said that their singles lineup is as solid as it can be and that they will work on "getting doubles more confident in their play."

The women will take on Texas Christian University and the University of Minnesota in matches this weekend at the Indoor Tennis Courts.

Women come from 21 point deficit to beat Creighton

By ROCKY HENDRICKSON
Universe Sports Writer

Lisa Rathbun led the BYU women's basketball team to victory, scoring 22 points Saturday night, but her most valuable performance may have been during halftime.

The Cougars started sluggishly — by the time the first half was over, Creighton was up by 21 points and pulling away. Cougar coach Jeanie Wilson was "slightly ticked."

The Cougars came out in the second half and scored 16 unanswered points, stumbling on to a 104-90 victory over the Lady Jays. The Cougars record rose to 9-14 while Creighton's fell to 9-13.

At halftime, while cheerleaders from Hillcrest High were entertaining the small crowd, Wilson was telling her team in the locker room she didn't care about winning; she just didn't want to be embarrassed. It was a matter of pride, she said.

"I told them, 'Your job is on the sideline,'" said Wilson. "I will not keep you next year if you don't play with some pride. We played zero, zilch, no defense in the first half."

For the rest of the break, Wilson left the team alone. That's when Rathbun, a sophomore, stood up to throw in her own piece of inspiration. Freshman guard Nikki Eyre said

Rathbun broke into tears, telling the team how upset she was. There were several red eyes in the room.

"It was incredible," said Eyre. "We told ourselves, 'We're not going to lose this game.'"

Creighton coach Bruce Rasmussen said, "We played two different games tonight. Nobody responded to pressure (in the second half). In my 19 years of coaching, I've never seen a team so afraid of pressure."

Kathy Halligan led the Lady Jays with 41 points. She sank five three-pointers in the first half and dominated both teams.

Rasmussen credited the Cougars' win to aggressive defense. The Lady Jays turned the ball over eight times in the second half before they were able to get it in the hoop. Eyre called it BYU's "mad-dog defense."

The game wasn't tied until sophomore Lisa White laid in two with 6:40 left, making the score 76-76. She had 19 points on the night. Rathbun later put in a free throw to put BYU ahead for the first time.

Melissa Sanford and Amy Spencer of the Lady Jays each had 16 points.

"We played with a purpose tonight," said Wilson. "Everybody did their own job."

Eyre said, "Coach sat us down after the game and said, 'Just remember this feeling.'"

Linksters finish third in Mexico match

By RODNEY ROBINSON
Universe Sports Writer

The BYU men's golf team shot a team score of 879 Saturday to place third out of 18 teams in the Texas Pan American Intercollegiate Golf Championship in Monterrey, Mexico.

BYU beat four top-twenty teams, including 8th-ranked Tulsa, but lost to Texas Christian University and tourney winner Eastern Tennessee State University.

BYU's John Johnson was the low Cougar golfer of the tourney with an individual score of 218. This score was good enough to land him ninth-place honors overall.

Cougar golfers Ramon Brobio and Eddie Fryatt each shot 222 to help pace BYU to its third place finish. Although content with their third place finish, the Cougars thought they could have done better. Brobio said, "We played O.K., but we could have done a lot better than we did."

Going into the final round, BYU was only six strokes behind ETSU and three strokes behind TCU. Fryatt said, "We played O.K. on the front nine but we had one bad hole. ETSU played really well on the back nine; they deserved to win."

The BYU golfers shot consistently as a team, with only seven strokes separating the high and low Cougar scores. Cougars Mike Weir and Ryan Rhees each had 225 strokes.

Weir, who won this same tourney in 1989, agreed with Brobio concerning the team's play. "John (Johnson) played pretty well, but no one played really well," Weir said. "We had a good chance to win going into the last day but we would miss a putt at the wrong time. We couldn't really get anything going."

BYU has been out of tournament action for three months and is hoping this tourney has helped prepare them for the upcoming tournaments. Brobio said, "The Monterrey tournament helped prepare us for our next tournament because it gave us a little more experience."

Fryatt said, "We're still a young team. Hopefully, we can play better in our next tournament."

BYU's golf team is indeed young — there are no seniors and only two juniors on the team. Although young, the team does not lack unity. Weir said, "The team is really starting to come together now."

BYU's next tournament is the Duck Invitational in Eugene, Ore., on March 19-20.

Gymnasts victims of BSU and judges

By WENDY SECRIST
Universe Sports Writer

With two gymnasts injured and another injured during competition in Boise, the BYU women's gymnastics team lost Friday to Boise State University.

BSU won the competition, finishing with 184.5. BYU finished second, with 184.2, and Seattle Pacific University took third, with 181.10.

Shauna Sudbury Mertz was injured in the first rotation, when she did a bar dismount, said Brad Cattermole, coach of the BYU women's gymnastics team.

"That hurt our score," said Cattermole. "It's like losing your quarterback when you lose one of the gymnasts you have to count on."

Cattermole said BYU was also a victim of hometown judges. "With this meet we were grossly underscored on bars, and BSU was grossly overscored on bars. We're a better team than Boise State — we should've beaten them," he said.

"It was frustrating," said Korie Jackman, who finished third for BYU in the all-around competition. "Bars were especially frustrating, and having Shauna get hurt at the beginning was pretty bad."

In addition to losing Mertz in competition this weekend, BYU had previously lost two other gymnasts to injuries. Wendy Hutchings was left behind so she could recover from a back injury. And Angela Carbone is still recovering from tearing her knee in warm-ups at the last meet.

"Hopefully, Wendy will be back at the next meet. Angela may be back at the next meet or in the next couple of meets, or not at all," Cattermole said.

Cattermole said the score this weekend, the lowest of the season for BYU, can be dropped and won't affect BYU's ranking. However, competing without three gymnasts could hurt the team.

"When you start losing top beam gymnasts, it's hard on the team. The other gymnasts are going to have to work that much harder to make up for it," he said.

"We can't lose another bar worker — we don't have anyone else," said Cattermole.

Jackman said even though injuries affect the team, she tries not to worry about them. "You can't let them get in your way. We'd just like to get in there and hit our routines. We know we can so we just need to do it."

Marianne Williams Squires finished second in the all-around competition with 37.65.

Squires took first place on the vault, scoring 9.35. She also finished first on the floor, with 9.65. First place on the beam went to Jackman, with 9.55.

BYU goes to Arizona

By ALEXA A. DAVIS
Universe Sports Writer

The last time BYU's baseball team met the Antelopes of Grand Canyon College, the Cougars swept the two-game series.

BYU came from behind in both games with late-inning rallies that were sparked by multiple home runs.

First baseman Randy Wilestead led the way with a total of three homers in the two games.

One of the home runs was a three-run game-winner that ended the series. "The first pitch was a fastball, and I just drove it to left-center field," said Wilestead.

Both teams are just beginning their seasons.

BYU is coming off a three-game sweep of the University of Nevada — Las Vegas last weekend.

GCC is trying to bounce back from two losses to Arizona State University.

During last year's meeting, the Antelopes featured a strong hitting attack and are expected to be strong again this year.

"They are usually a very good hitting team so we expect the games to be high scoring," said outfielder Burt Call.

One new face on the GCC squad will be ex-Cougar pitcher, Bart Grubbs. Grubbs transferred there after last season.

Grubbs' pitching speed has been clocked in the mid-90's.

The Antelopes are attempting to be accepted into the NCAA this season and must win a certain number of games to do so.

Wins over big baseball schools like BYU would give them a good chance of being accepted.

In preparation for the games, the Cougars are hoping to keep doing what worked for them last week against Las Vegas.

"If we combine our hitting and pitching, we should come away with three wins," said Wilestead.

GCC is in Mesa, Ariz. BYU was to play GCC Monday, but Monday's game was rained out.

The Cougars and the Antelopes will play today.

BYU's next games will be Feb. 23 and 24 against Mesa State.

New LDS missions announced

S. America convert rate high; growth causes split of missions

By TONIA SHARP
Universe Staff Writer

Led by convert baptisms in Latin America and the Philippines, growth of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has surged since 1970, according to the LDS Church statistics and Brigham Young University religion instructor Richard Cowan.

Not only has the LDS Church membership skyrocketed from 2.8 million members in 1970 to more than 7 million in 1990, but the number of LDS missionaries since 1970 has more than tripled, said Don LeFevre, a LDS Church spokesperson.

"There are doors being opened to help meet the spiritual needs of the saints," Cowan said.

With an all-time high of more than 40,000 missionaries, the number of organized missions have been steadily increasing since January.

The new missions announced include Argentina Mandoza, Argentina Resistencia, Argentina Trelew, Brazil Manaus, and Brazil Salvador.

These five additions bring the total 1990 announced missions to 16. LeFevre said during 1989 only six new missions were announced.

With the formation of the new units, there will be nine missions in Argentina and 12 in Brazil. Each of the new missions formed in those countries to date were the result of splitting existing missions, LeFevre said.

April graduation Thursday the 26th

By Universe Services

Spring Commencement will be Thursday, April 26, at 5:30 p.m. in the Marriott Center, according to BYU officials. The academic processional will begin at 4:45 p.m. in front of the ASB.

This is the first time a Thursday afternoon schedule will be used for an April Commencement. The new schedule is the result of a successful experience last August when BYU held commencement on a Thursday afternoon to accommodate honorary doctoral recipient and speaker Elie Wiesel, said Jeffery M. Tanner, chair of BYU's Commencement Committee. However, the new arrangement may not be permanent.

The BYU administration approved a continuation of the August 1989 schedule on a trial basis to see how it works during April Commencement when the number of graduates is higher than in August," Tanner said.

Convocation ceremonies will take place on Friday, April 27, as follows:

— 8 a.m.: Marriott School of Management/College of Business in the Marriott Center; College of Fine Arts and Communications in the HFAC; and College of Physical and Mathematical Sciences in the Provo Tabernacle.

— 10 a.m.: College of Engineering and Technology in the Marriott Center; College of Education in the HFAC; College of Nursing in the JSB; and College of Physical Education in the Provo Tabernacle.

— 2 p.m.: College of Family, Home and Social Sciences in the Marriott Center; College of Humanities in the HFAC; and the J. Reuben Clark Law School in the Provo Tabernacle.

4 p.m.: College of Biology and Agriculture in the ELWC Ballroom.

The U.S. Army and Air Force ROTC commissioning ceremonies will be Saturday, April 28, at 9 a.m. in the Pardoe Theatre of the HFAC.

Faculty members are invited to an informal reception to meet the commencement speaker and other dignitaries Thursday, April 26 at 4 p.m., west of the ASB.

Events on Friday, April 27 include the president's reception for graduates and parents from 9 to 11 a.m. in the ELWC Memorial Lounge and the Alumni luncheon at noon.

Companies fix sewage blunder

By MARCI WILCOX
Universe Staff Writer

Three industries failed to comply with federal water standards, while an Orem City study revealed no existing violations, said the Salt Lake Water Treatment Plant Lab director.

"The three companies, Easton Aluminum, Shovaers Electronics and Evans Metal Plating, were found to have high levels of metal in discharge, but have made substantial improvements since notification," said Florence Perez.

If a company is found to be in non-compliance, it can be taken to federal court, Perez said. "We have had judges issue criminal fines ranging from $1,000 to $65,000 in the past."

Seventeen out of 72 industries in Salt Lake are significant enough to be federally regulated, she said. "Each industry is checked once a year."

If violations are identified, the industry will be checked quarterly or monthly depending on the seriousness of the problem, Perez said.

"Overall, the Salt Lake Water Treatment Plant has complied well and the cooperation of businesses and industries has been good," Perez said. The plant received the Gold Award from the National Pollution Discharge Elimination System in 1989 for "Total Compliance."

"The National Pretreatment Program to control the discharge of toxic or hazardous waste includes sewer water, storm water and underground drainage," said Bruce Chestnut, division manager of the Public Works Department of Orem.

Gases, oils and other various chemicals leave pollutants behind that cannot be treated, Chestnut said. "When we can't take the dangerous contents out, the material is discharged into Utah Lake and causes problems with the habitat."

Salt Lake City does not have this problem because there is no viable fish life in the Great Salt Lake, Perez said.

"Restaurants seem to be our biggest problem because of the high levels of oil which are poured down sinks," Chestnut said. When a business or industry is found to be in violation, Orem City puts them on a compliance schedule, he said.

The name of the business or industry will also be listed in a public notice distributed by Ray Olsen, division manager of Orem Public Works, who regulates the businesses and industries to make sure they don't discharge chemicals that cannot be treated, Chestnut said.

Ethiopians face famine as civil war rages on

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The lives of up to 5 million Ethiopians are at risk because anti-government forces have shut down a port that has been the key entry point for outside food assistance, U.S. officials say.

Further aggravating the situation has been the prospect of severely diminished harvests throughout northern Ethiopia as a result of poor rainfall.

To the west, U.S. officials say a crisis situation is rapidly developing in the Sudan, where a bitter civil war has prevented the transport of relief supplies to rebel-held territory in the southern part of the country.

President Bush sent a letter to the Sudanese president last week asking for his cooperation in restarting the international relief effort, to which the United States contributes $15.7 million. Renewed fighting has led to the suspension of food flights to southern Sudan and the government also is preventing the departure of a relief train along a route where food shortages are severe. The rebels also have been blocking relief efforts.

Estimates of the number of Sudanese potentially affected by famine range between 1 million and 3 million.

In Ethiopia, the cutoff of relief supplies through Massawa, a deep water port on the Red Sea, affects not only Eritrea province but also Tigray and portions of three other provinces. "The next six weeks to two months is the critical time," said Andrew Natsios, director of the Office of Foreign Disaster Assistance. "We're trying to explore options for getting the food in," he said. He added that a "worst nightmare" scenario is developing — a civil war and a famine in the same area at the same time.

Companies in Concert

Tune into the executives during Retail Fortnight
February 20 - March 2

Learn what it takes to be an executive.

The number and quality of stores visiting BYU is music to the ears of students.

The mix of stores and their activities is unique to BYU. Since most university students don't understand what a retail executive does, activities of the Retail Fortnight (two week period) not only include recruiting of interns and graduate, but also company orientations. Visitors will also participate in class presentations, panel discussions and Executive Lectures--all with the goal of upgrading students' understanding of what executives do and executive career opportunities with their companies.

Not only for business students.

When most people think of retailing, they think of merchandising--buying or store management functions. Merchandising is the heart of retailing, but there are other retailing opportunities as well: financial control, human resource development, store operations, sales promotion, and electronic data processing.

Because of this wide range of required executive talent, the Skaggs Institute works with not only business management, but with nine other undergraduate programs and three graduate programs. The undergraduate programs include: accounting, information management, clothing and textiles, communications, agricultural economics, computer science, managerial economics, design and interior environment. The graduate programs are: Masters of Business Administration, Accountancy, and Organizational Behavior.

Retailers want grads with liberal arts degrees, too.

Although many retailers prefer students with business or retailing backgrounds, there are some who prefer the broad background of a liberal arts degree.

For sophomores and juniors, too.

Sophomores and juniors particularly are invited to attend orientation sessions to learn about executive career opportunities. If you find one of these career paths sounds interesting, you are in the excellent position to better prepare for a successful and executive career. Select several orientation sessions that you would like to attend. Your questions will be welcomed.

Company Orientations

Executives will brief students regarding their companies and the executive career opportunities with them--a must for students interested in learning about the company. Students who are signed up for recruiting and internship interviews should attend. All students are welcome.

Executive Lecture

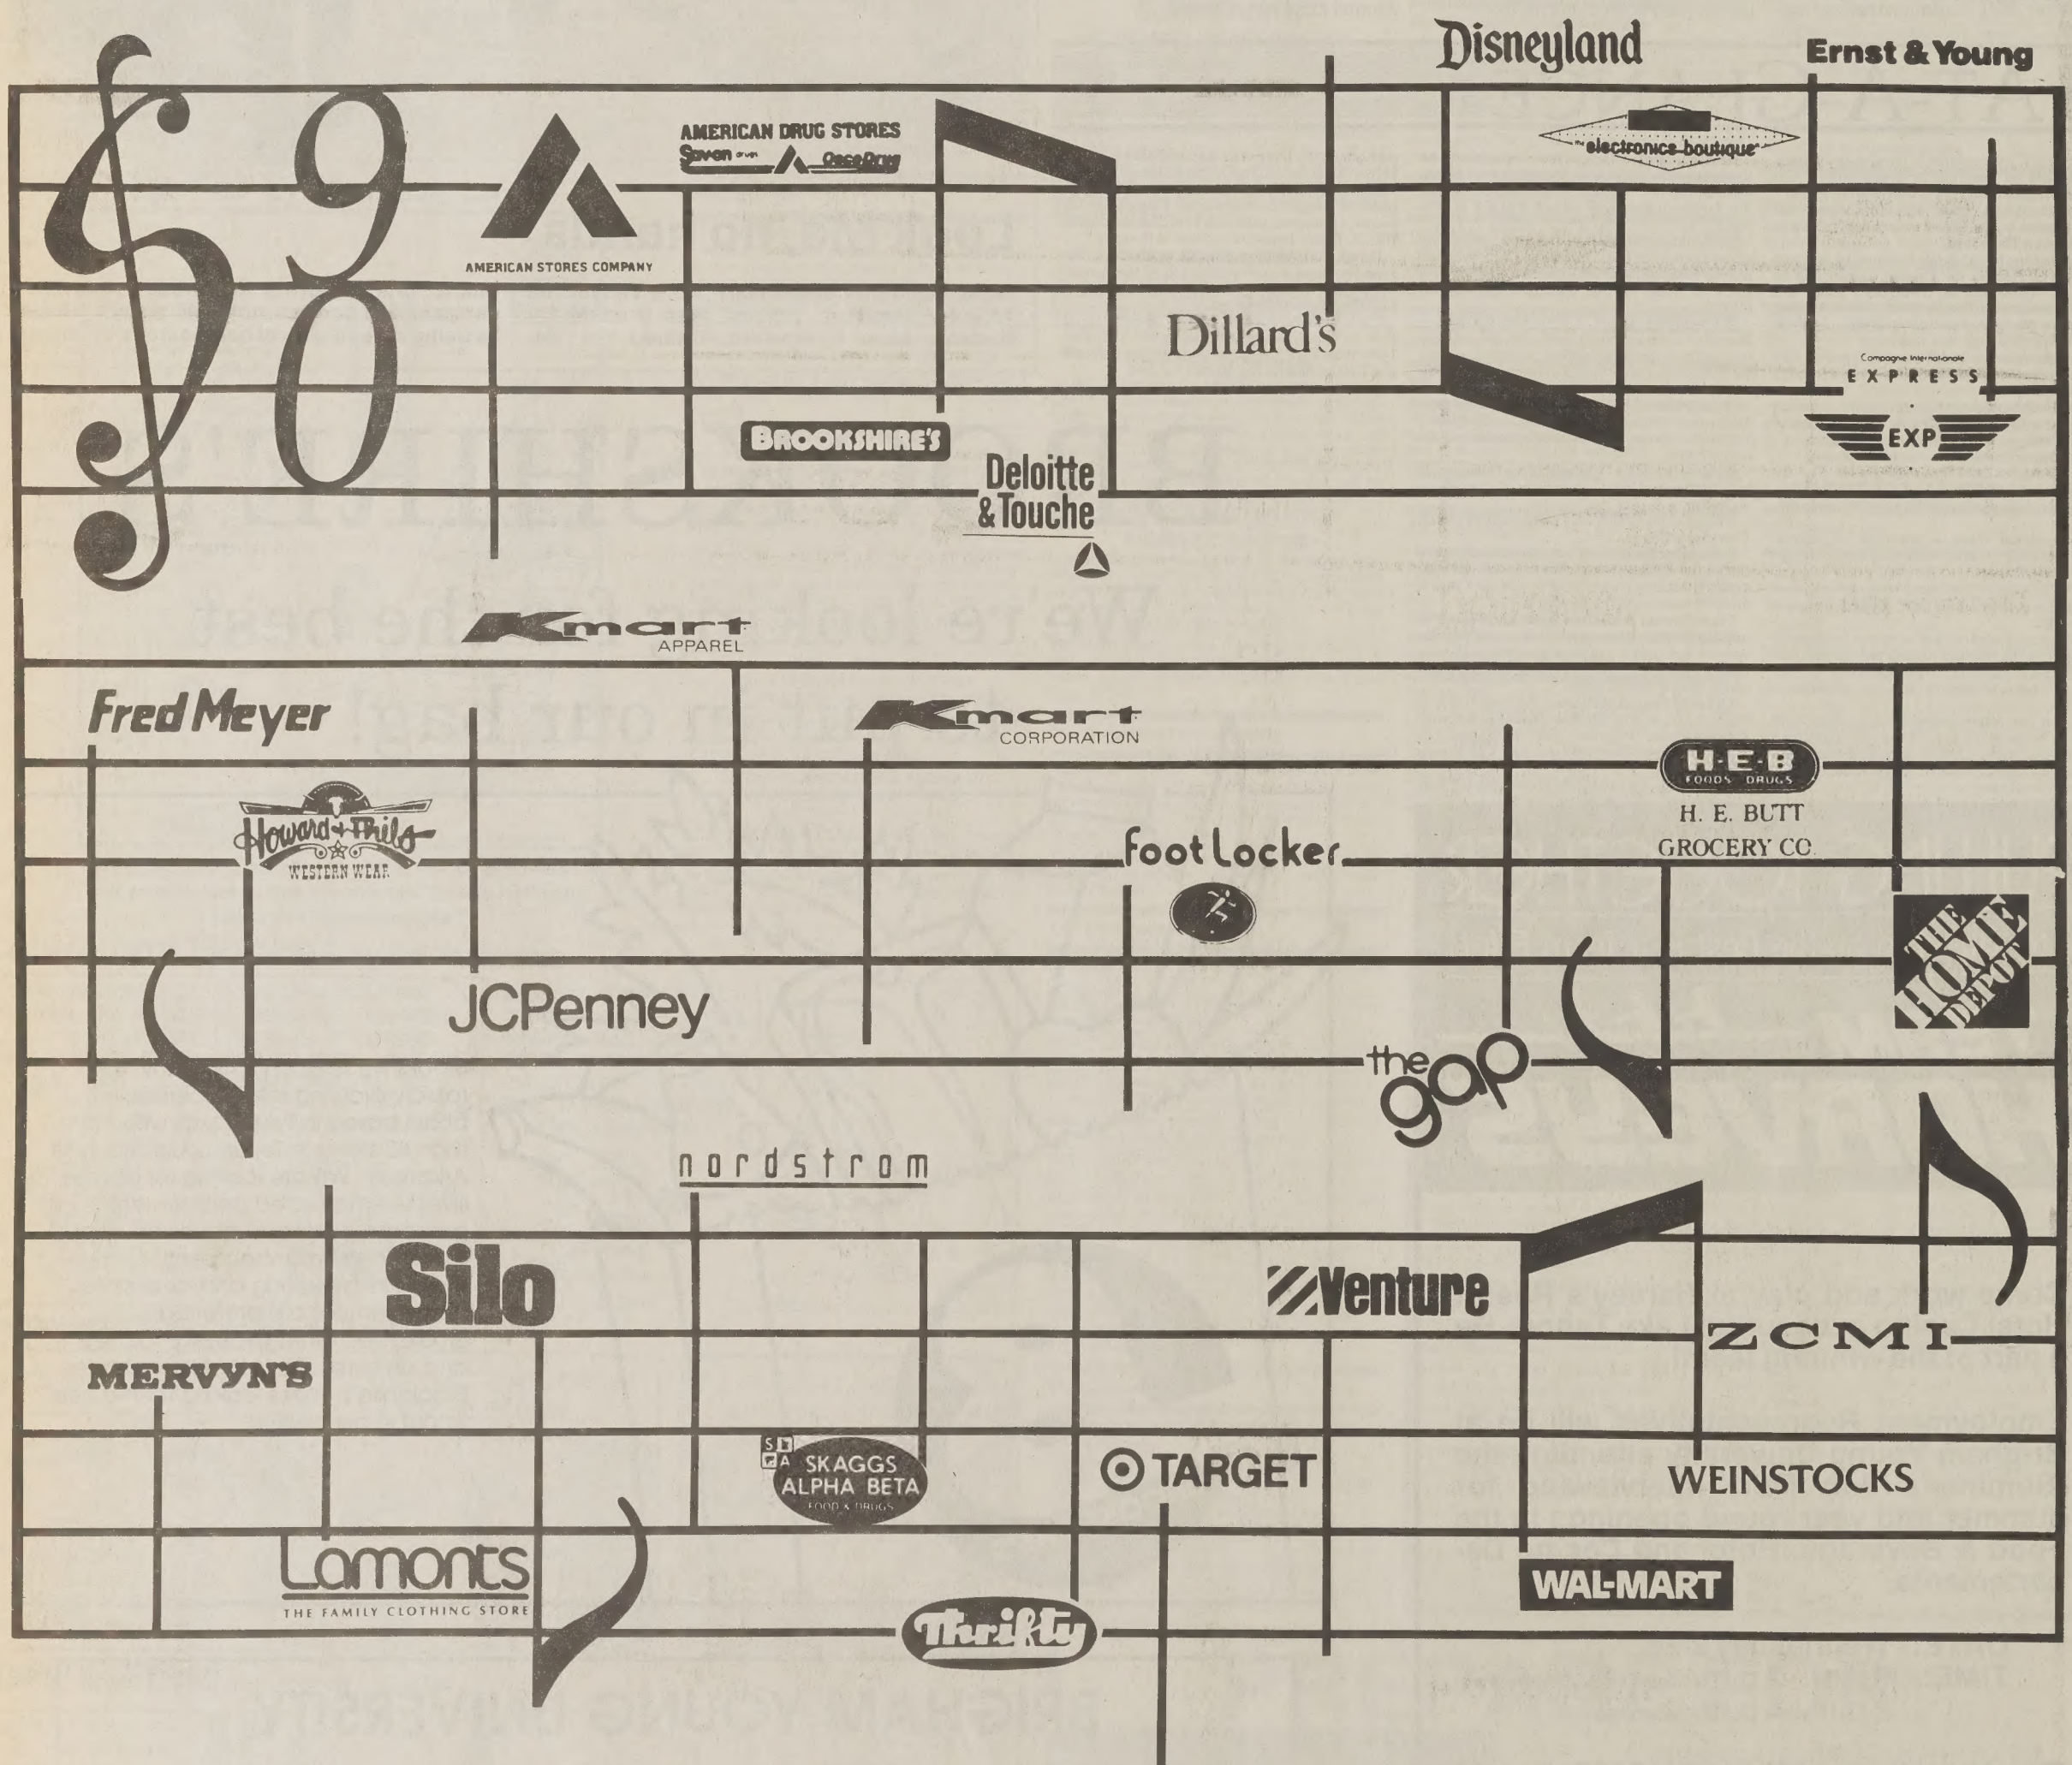

G. Kent Burnett, Chairman and CEO, Dillard's Southwest Division, is the featured executive of the Retail Fortnight and will speak on "Dillard's Strategies for the 90s" Thursday, February 22, 2:00 and 4:00 p.m., 151 TNRB.

Class Presentations and Panel Discussions

Students are welcome to attend any of these on a space available basis. Classes or panel discussions will involve a wide variety of subjects.

Where can you learn more?

At the Retail Fortnight bulletin board, first floor, Tanner Building opposite rooms 120 and 130 and the Skaggs Institute of Retail Management, 480 Tanner Building.
